Networking & Security

Businesses today are faced with multiple threats from both inside and outside of their organisations — high employee turnover and malicious online activity being common examples. Often, an organisation's network security practices are not sufficient to protect them from today's sophisticated Internet threats.

Network security refers to any activities designed to protect the usability, integrity and safety of your network. The goal of securing your network is to target a variety of threats and ensure these are prevented from entering or spreading within your network.

Security is not the only issue facing many corporate networks – performance is also a major concern for organisations attempting to share files and conduct business across wide area networks. Choosing the right provider and solution for your needs can be a daunting task.

Let alltasksIT take the complication out of networking and security by helping you to design and implement an end-to-end solution which focuses on performance without compromising security. Our vendor agnostic approach allows us to make the right decision for your business.

WAN Optimisation

Are you considering an upgraded WAN link due to poor performance? Control and improve the branch to branch performance of your WAN with Quality of Service (QoS), WAN acceleration, deep packet inspection and compression, whilst monitoring your WAN traffic in real time.

Security & Network Design & Consulting

From switching and network topology and design to VLAN's, alltasksIT can consult with your IT team to help improve the performance of your local area network. We can also help design internal security policies and implement end-user procedural changes to ensure security practices are adhered to.
